European Union Aviation Safety Agency

FAQ n.96116

FAQs:

DAT, Air Traffic Management (ATM) / Air Navigation Services (ANS), Regulations

Question:

I have a DAT provider certificate (or equivalent) issued by another authority. Is it possible for EASA to recognise it and/or accept it?

Answer:

“Equivalent” to an EASA certified Type 1 or Type 2 DAT provider are defined in any Aviation Safety Agreement between the European Union (EU) and a third country, including any Technical Implementation Procedures (TIP), or any Working Arrangements (WA) between EASA and the competent authority of a third country. Up to date information regarding the status of such agreements can be found on our website 'International Cooperation Overview'.

Last updated:

25/04/2019

Link:

https://www.easa.europa.eu/en/faq/96116