European Union Aviation Safety Agency

FAQ n.19115

FAQs:

General, Regulations

Question:

Can the information provided in EASA's FAQ be considered legally binding?

Answer:

No, the information included in the Agency’s FAQs cannot be considered in any way to be legally binding. EASA is not the competent authority to interpret EU Law. Such responsibility rests with the judicial system, and ultimately with the Court of Justice of the European Union. Therefore any information included in these FAQs shall only be considered as EASA's technical understanding on a specific matter.
